A HUNTING TRIP

in the Forest.

BY DR. J. HAMPDEN PORTER.

Montel was dead; no wonder we waited vainly. They put what remained of him in a cave, and came back howling heathen litanies with Khudeck at their head.

.This is what he told us: "The Sahib could find no elephants in that unsainted country, only old tracks. He was displeased, and swore they must be there. Whereupon we worked very hard. but found nothing, and afterwards turned off towards the west, where some villages lay, hoping that information might be procured at these places.

"I am a poor man; what do I know? yet even then it appeared to me that the shadow escape? At this time there came a look ing place—then the end came.

my father-may heaven cool his rest-gave what was to be done? That unsainted me much instruction concerning omens and country had to be crossed; neither could preforewarnings. Moreover, it seemed mani- cautions have availed against the decree of fest that these solitudes abounded in ma- fate. lignant beings; emissaries of fate leading "While encamped here my Lord heard Bajee Ras, who had been a priest, with your case it should be needed, and he bore his servant, made charms to avert any strong gun. I desired to accompany him, but this enchantment, praying fervently also that was not permitted; so these two departed, despised devils, neither believed in any except from what Heera Nund said; yet magic except the jadoo which is called God knows if it is true, since terror and science? Remonstrance might have ex-affliction had taken away the man's senses. ceeded the bounds of respect.

quainted with. This accursed killed cer- and glimmering. tain men—their misbegotten names do not one occasion, and four at another.

pitiated, he devised a charm which blinded twigs distilling red tears of lac. O, ye shinsmiled bitterly, and he likewise cursed cloud. somewhat, though not with any violence. Find a camp, Khudeck, was his orderas the skin of my soul.

innumerable, all silent. My Lord stood those tearings and tramplings-no one can apple had been steeped, and those spirits prayed vehemently, fearing to faint. looked upon him earnestly. They streamed Peace fled from my path; but I said no and smothered sounds word, for what would it have availed?

Sahib reproached them for their carelessness they told that foolish story about the anchoret again. Ya! ban! it was a lie. How should these vile Gonds possess a saint? Can it be believed that miracles were possible in order to preserve them?

Thus I saw that he walked in darkness. and knew not what oppressed his spirit. Bajee Ras and your servant followed him closely, thinking, foolishly, that something might be done; for who bows with resignation until the inevitable has arrived?

"As we went down into a vale which resembled some dry lakebed filled with trees, lamentations assailed our ears. Two or three huts stood in thick brush, and women mourned for a child just carried off by a panther.

"This beast would not go far thus burdened, so Montel sahib brightened up forthwith, giving commands quickly as was his custom, and we found the trail at once, which truly was like a thundee suruk, a road whose sides have been planted. This infamous took no precautions. He despised Gonds, and his mind; an incomer (and give it to him quickly, for, Quartermaster in the volunteer establish-had become as that of a ghumundi—one mad with pride.

"The sahib saw him first in a great tree.

Like many panthers, he had put his prey into its fork to be devoured at leisure. Then, however, that destroyer of the innocent was out on a limb; for we were seen, and his design was to fight.

"These animals are very bold; this one may writed till it was the close the smaller the spread of shot; hold ahead of birds passing above you. Last, but not least, never check the even swing of the gun in a quartering shot. I grefer to first truly cover the mark, then advance the gun till only the tip of the bird's bill is visible, or, when rather high, till the muzzle leads its object by the proper distance, and then instantly pull the trigger.

When the gun had give it to him quickly, for Quartermaster in the volunteer establishment. He has been on leave of absence for the past four months. His resignation has been accepted by the President, to take effect Aug. 31.

Byrne, 6th U. S., who distinguished themady an incomer (and give it to him quickly, for every yard the closer the smaller the spread of shot; hold ahead of birds passing above you. Last, but not least, never check the even swing of the gun in a quartering shot. I grefer to first truly cover the mark, then advance the gun till only the tip of the bird's bill is visible, or, when rather high, till the muzzle leads its object by the proper distance, and then instantly pull the trigger.

When the despised of a plumundi—one they you. Last, but not least, never check the even swing of the gun in a quartering shot.

Byrne, 6th U. S., who distinguished themselves in Cuba, are the sons of Surgeon bird's bill is visible, or, when rather high, till the muzzle leads its object by the proper distance, and then instantly pull the trigger.

When the despised of a guartering shot.

Byrne, 6th U. S., who distinguished themselves in Cuba, are the sons of Surgeon bird's bill its visible, or, when rather high, till the muzzle leads its object by the proper distance, and then instan

"These animals are very bold; this one only waited till it was time to spring, and crouched in readiness, with glowing eyes. But Montel bahadur did not allow an attack to be made. His aim was quick, and the bullet broke up all the top of that fierce brute's head. Verily the panther did my Lord much good; he became cheerful. It was the will of God that this should be so, and I

this, where traveling had to be done in ravines, and there was no knowing what the next one contained; so that a herd might be near without one's getting any sign of their

"It must have been the home of panthers: for besides seeing pugs in abundance, these dry dark gorges were frequently cleft to Montel Meets a Violent Death form smaller recesses, while caves innumerable burrowed into the rocky walls. Panthers have pleasure in places where no tiger would stay. Furthermore, besides other game, those monkeys they prefer to anything else abound here beyond measure, every part of the forest being full of them.

"Montel sahib desired to stay here. He was a slayer of panthers, who took no thought concerning danger; but those things we heard about the rogue caused him to hasten, since he remembered that promises of protection had been given, and those the spread out so that it makes a wide, flat surface. This surface is full the comfortable cabins that had formerly been used as "quarters" for a large force of house servants. it was now time to seek him in earnest.

began to darken over my Lord. He was forsook me, though there seemed no need of set on his way, however, and could not turn watchfulness. When morning broke we aside; the current had him; how should he set forth again, and marched to a noon rest-which foreboded evil; it grew upon his face day by day, and my spirit became disguisted.

"That was the first sign I perceived, there was no view on any significance of the way they are everything is plain now; because the may have been an imprudence, but the remark is though everything is plain now; because the may have been an imprudence, but the park near the camp, seek to kill it whenever the two come to seek to kill it whenever the two co en to destruction. Therefore, when jungle fowl stirring, and wished to shoot matters were understood as being ominous, some. Heera Nund carried the big rifle, in only some small misfortune would come. and went some distance. At Purmesur! "But what could be said to my Lord, who how can your servant tell what happened.

"He reported that they came to a spot "Three more marches took us to some where sal trunks and mohwa grew thickly. Gonds who were collecting lac gum. They These trees were covered with creepers, worked far out in the jungle, and gave news | which hung like curtains from their boughs, of that elephant your highnesses are ac-making the light like that of evening, faint

"A mighty peepul also stood there, half dwell in my memory-but two perished on dead. One part was clothed with dark, glossy leaves, that which remained shone "When asked whether precautions had white as milk where its bare limbs gleamed been adopted, these infidels said that they in the shade. A clump of pale-yellow were safe. An anchoret protected both bamboos near by waved slowly; there were themselves and the village. Being pro- jujubes, with thorn bushes all about, their the elephant to their presence, and if he apling ones who know why! there too waited proached it would lure him away by false the accursed one-silent as a panther who sees his prey; and when they approached "At this information the heaven-born he stormed out as lightning issues from a

"Heera Nund says that while the sahib snatched his rifle, he climbed a vine, but he murna sub ke huk hai, death is the right of knows not in what way security was atall. This was a saying which he learned tained. My Lord fired-this he had to dofrom those Pundits who taught him Hindu- notwithstanding the elephant was then so stani; for Montel sahib was learned, and close that a bullet could not enter his brain, since he shot the tiger had been to me even but passed through above. It did not even stop him, and instantly the sahib was "Yet soon I knew what must be; yea, the thrown high up, so that Heera heard his gates of vision opened during sleep, and body rustle among the leaves. This brute warning sent. There were ghosts acted like a mad devil; yet what followedamong them with a cup in which the death speak of, for the shikari shut his eyes and

"After little remained which could be more and wavered like smoke when it is blown, mutilated, the brute rushed away, covered and a low, dull thunder sounded, such as the with blood. This, your highnesses, is what sacred Ganges might make if falling into Heera Nundtold when he returned to camp. abysses that plunged down forever. He We had heard nothing there-not the drank of the potion. Ai Kumbukht! O, sahib's shot nor those trumpetings or miserable one, who could do nothing, I saw screams which must have been loud and him drink, and knew that he must die. Bitter was the taste of bread thereafter. while everywhere the forest was very thick,

"Upon examining this place it was found separate barrel of water, as two put in the off and discharged.
"When we came to the village where those that the man spoke truth concerning what same tank would fight for the food given LAST DEATH I "Upon examining this place it was found gum gatherers lived, his highness saw there happened; also that where the elephant was no precaution, so that with jungle or stood he must have been invisible in such a forest, ravines and dells all round it, this light. We then took my Lord's body, laid destroying beast could have come unex it away in a cave, marking the spot carepectedly at any time. Likewise when the fully, and returned. God grant there be no delay in taking vengeance."
(To be continued.)

Shooting in the Field. Outing.

The reliable rules for shooting flying to San birds are as follows: Hold a trifle low for a Manila. "The Sahib knew men cannot be saved in spite of themselves; but I think he was constrained by his conscience to tell those pig-begotten miscreants what to do. There was much gloom in his eyes this day, and I said, "is my Lord sick?" 'Somehow, yes,' he answered, though the ill feeling is vague; perhaps an attack of jungle fever threatens.'

Thus I saw that he

Porto Ricans' Unique Style of Making a Fish Catch Fish Philadelphia Times.

Porto Rico has devised a new method of fishing that will prove interesting to sports-men. The fishermen in many localities are using trained remoras for fishing. These queer creatures are regular falcons of the sea, and their captors use them very much the same as falcons were used in the middle centuries. They are fierce, swift creatures that can make better time than any other fish in the southern waters, and they are quite plentiful around Porto Rico.

Their bodies are eel-shaped, but with a peculiar head, over which a skin like a beag is drawn. This baggy skin is drawn up tight to the body at will, so that it offers no resistance to the water when swimming, and it can be spread out so that it makes

The nature of the remora is to attach

Sometimes they will attach themselves to the bottom of the small boals, and by dropping overboard a little food for them of the boat, and no amount of pulling can break its hold when jerked straight up. But the fishermen have found that by a few side twists the suckers can be lifted with ease.

When taken off the bottom of the boat When taken off the bottom of the boat the captured fish is put in a tank of water, where it is fed and cared for. In time it learns not to be afraid of its captors. But it must go through a serious ordeal that tries its friendship to a degree. A small iron ring is fastened into its tail near the end. This is a painful but not serious operation. It takes two weeks for the wound thus made to heal up. But at the end of that time the fish recovers some of its friendliness for its captor who has daily whisky to the soldiers was promptly ar-fed it. When the iron ring has been in the tail for a couple of months the first training lesson, and it is very hungry when it goes into the water.

Finding itself balked in trying to attach under military guard. itself to the bottom of the boat, the creature swims out and looks for other prey. If a shark, a large turtle, or porpoise hap-pens to be in the vicinity the remora will make a dive for it and attach its suckers to the under side of its body. Then the fishermen begin to haul in on the line. So powerful is the suction of the fish that a hundred-pound turtle or shark can be pulled through the water and lifted into the

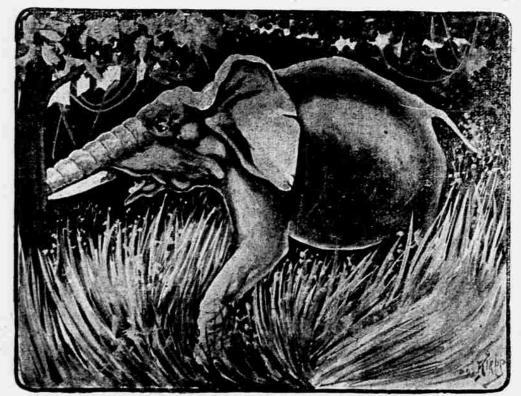

There is simply no let-up in the fish after it has once attached itself to a surface, except to tear its body to pieces. If it attaches itself to a small, worthless fish it is attaches itself to a small, worthless fish it is thrown overboard for another catch. If it brings up a particularly large and valuable fish or turtle, the fishermen reward it with an extra allowance of food. In this way the remora learns to discriminate between the valuable and worthless fish in a marvelous fashion.

Generally only one successful haul can be made a day with a single remora, and if the fisherman is going to stay out all day he will take several trained sea falcons

SONS AND DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS.

Maj. John A. Logan, son of the late San Francisco for embarkation for when the gun has to lead the bird in this position, no hesitancy should be indulged in after the muzzle has passed ahead of the bill, for the shooter cannot then see his game, and any sudden change of flight may prove disastrous. This is a shot at which most men fail by shooting behind.

"THIS BRUTE ACTED LIKE A MAD DEVIL."

the will of God that this should be so, and I have seen it before; those upon the fcy wind of death is blowing often forget its chill.

"As has been said, there were no fresh elephant tracks; moreover, it seemed useless along the line of the Baltimore & Ohio Railof death is blowing often forget its chill.

"As has been said, there were no fresh elephant tracks; moreover, it seemed useless to seek further in a country broken up like to seek further in a coun to seek further in a country broken up like show the views to advantage.

Brooklyn Life.

Mamma—You must be a little man, Johnny. Don't you remember how brave Tommy was when I took him to the dentist's?

Johnny (scornfully)—He never there before.

Domestic Bliss.

Chicago News. beat the carpet? Well, you're mistaken."

We found the town of Edenton a beauti- appointment to them that they could not sion was taken possession of as head-quarters, and the men were quartered in given passes, and before noon a good lute of the men to their officers.

This must needs be a great hunt, and when all had gone to rest I wrapped myself in a blanket to keep off the cold breeze, and sat thinking of how much would have to be done before an elephant like this, so wary and ferocious, could be killed.

"Maybe it was his voice I heard later, sounding faintly down the wind; for sleep forsook me, though there seemed no need of watchfulness. When morning broke we set forth again, and marched to a noon resting place—then the end came.

"Everybody sat about; some prepared food and offices of the cold and offices of the remora is to attach itself to hard, flat surfaces to secure its food. It has learned that by attaching and we had no trouble in arranging an exchange of coffee, sugar, salt pork, and hardtack for an abundance of sweet potators and exchange of coffee, sugar, salt pork, and hardtack for an abundance of sweet potators and exchange of coffee, sugar, salt pork, and hardtack for an abundance of sweet potators and exchange of coffee, sugar, salt pork, and hardtack for an abundance of sweet potators and exchange of coffee, sugar, salt pork, and hardtack for an abundance of sweet potators and exchange of coffee, sugar, salt pork, and hardtack for an abundance of sweet potators and exchange of coffee, sugar, salt pork, and hardtack for an abundance of sweet potators and exchange of coffee, sugar, salt pork, and hardtack for an abundance of sweet potators and exchange of coffee, sugar, salt pork, and the cam pits to large fishes just near the mouth it can pick up a good living without making the provided for the men was superior to anything the small pieces before they can be gobbled up by its host. When it once attaches the shark or whale it cannot be loosened by the big creature, and it steals a ride through the water until it is ready of our former antagonists—members of Hoke's old division. The company drills were held in a little park near the can pits and we had no trouble in arranging and exchange of coffee, sugar, salt pork, and the can pick up a good living witho Produce of all kinds was very cheap, frequently applauded when difficult portions of the drill were executed with prethey can be induced to remain there until the boat reaches shoal water. Then the fishermen suddenly jump into the water and turn the boat over on its side, and before the fish can detach itself they grab it. When it finds itself caught the remora refuses to yield up its hold on the bottom of the boat, and no amount of pulling can

> Acting under these instructions, sev eral persons were relieved of "C. S. A." buttons and the gold braid from their coat sleeves. This provoked considerable resentment, and threats were made against rank of the late Confederate army.

its friendliness for its captor who has daily whisky to the soldiers was promptly arrested. Some of his friends endeavored tail for a couple of months the first training of the fish is attempted.

By this time it does not hurt the fish to pull on the ring and it can be lifted up by it. A light but very strong braided cord is fastened into the ring, and the remora is taken to the fishing grounds for its first lesson. When plunged overboard its first effort is to attach itself to the bottom of the boat, and a net has been arranged under the boat to prevent this. The remora has been fed very sparingly for a week or two before it is given its first lesson, and it is very hungry when it goes to rescue him, and fired two shots at the

had been guilty of numerous crimes, and the prisoners were forwarded to Newbern

The Autumn passed away pleasantly One day a steamer came to the wharf, and we received orders to at once embark in her and proceed to Roanoke Island. The that our brother officers had completed task to make out the muster-out roll of a company. The name of every man that had ever been borne upon the rolls of the company must be shown, and his complete military history given. All of his accounts of pay and bounty received and due Uncles," and he turned and walked away. must be shown. When the rolls were I knew at once that the mother and sister completed the company was paraded and formally mustered out of the service by a them Mustering Officer, who signed the rolls and the discharge paper of every man. But asked the mother. "Been cuttin' up some the discharge paper of every man. But though they were mustered out, the men were not to be released from service until they could be taken to Baltimore and paid seeing my sober face, she asked wildly:

"My attention was turned to the bat through the coddin moth, the insect to blame for most worm-eaten appleas. In an orchard near my home I found nine of their arrest. One of the immediate congrubs of this insect in a minute. Changing the discharge paper. the discharge paper in the discharge paper. I reckwith him. Each one must be confined in a they could be taken to Baltimore and paid

LAST DEATH IN THE REGIMENT. The night before the muster-out one had been sick for a long time, but had last message. She listened quietly, said struggled to keep up and reach home alive. Gen. John A. Logan, was recently appointed by the President Major in the Volunteer army. He has been assigned to the 33d Inf., and ordered to join that regiment at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., for duty. The 33d regiment is under orders to proceed that he might keep up with the column. The afternoon before his death he sent for fight I stay right wid de ole 30th."

He had been a good, faithful soldier, and assured him that everything should be done as he wished. That night he died and his last worls were: "I know de little Lieutenant will tell my mudder."

Lordered a coffin made for him; the con cany went to the grave, a volley was fired n his honor, and with my own hands I prepared and placed the headloard wer his grave. On the board I carved his feath, and as an epitaph I added:

THE ALWAYS STAYED WITH THE LINE." Some delay was experienced in obtainng transportation, and it was a week sefore a steamer came to take us away. Our route was through the Dismal Swamp Canal. It was the morning of the fourth day after leaving Rosnoke that, loaded in an exclusive arrangement good for a limopen barges, and towed by a little, wheezy tug, we approached Norfolk. A large FEATHER, the best and most interesting nan-of-war was lying in the stream, and of all the poultry journals. By this arthe strong current carried our barge almost alongside of the big warship.

Our men were cold, dirty, and huddled ogether, and the blue jackets at once began is a new subscriber who asks for it when o guy them most unmercifully. An he sends in his dollar, provided, of course, Irish sailor asked: "An' is the rest of yez he chooses no other book or publication, regiment down South a pickin' cotton?"

Quick as a flash Boh Bowen pulled the ly without extra cost! cases from the colors and held them up. The flags were tattered, torn, bullet-riddled, stained with blood and powder; the color-lances bore buflet-marks, and their brass ornaments had been shot out of shape. Shaking the colors, Bob called out:

"Sixteen hundred men have followed dem colors, an' we's alis dat's leff. Dem colors was at Fort Fisher, an' de line didn't break an' run back!"

This last sentence was a center-shot, for at the assault om Fort Fisher the naval assaulting force had been broken and forced back to the beach. For a moment the sailors gazed at the war-worn flags, then they cheered long and loud. Again the ready wit of Bob Bowen had shown itself at the right time and place.

ARRIVAL AT BALTIMORE.

THE FEATHER is a large quarto-sized magazine devoted exclusively to poultry and pigeons, and contains from 32 to 48 pages each issue. It is printed on the best calendered paper, and is profusely illustrated with new and original drawings each issue. A large, fine supplements are supplements are

ARRIVAL AT BALTIMORE. We arrived at Baltimore at daylight Sunday morning. It was cold, and the snow-flakes were falling. A few sleepy shivering policemen were the only per sons visible. For weeks the men had been anticipating the pleasure of marching through the streets of Baltimore. "W'en de ole 30th march up Baltimo' street past de monument, den vo' see de style!" had been their talk, and it was a bitter disame to us. Then the men received their pay and bounty and an honorable disharge. On the muster-out roll of my

'ul village, located at the head of Albe- parade before the admiring eyes of their Then Serg't Scott formed the company.

"W'at my George been doin', sah?"

g my sober face, she asked wildly: "Is he sick? Is he dead?" As quietly as I could I informed her of the death of her son. I praised his soldierof my men-George Uncles-died. He like qualities, and faithfully delivered his

"Thank you, sah," and then both of them went away crying.

It was three days before the Paymaster

London Standard.

canding with counsel within 24 hours after their arrest. One of the immediate consequences of this measure may be to put a stop to those "confrontations" at the morgue which are so dramatic a feature of French criminal procedure. With a view to bringing a murderer to confess, he is taken to the morgue, and there brought face to face with the body of his victim. Every artifice is used to make the confrontation as impressive as possible, as it is hoped that the terrible sight he is compelled to gaze orchard near my home I found nine of the grubs of this insect in a minute. Chancing away, I found only four of the grubs in an hour's search. There is an old barn near hour's search. There is an old barn near the morgue, in which live a colony of between 75 and 100 bats. The owner informed me that his apples were always free from worms."

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the specific remedy for troubles of the blood, kidneys, bowels or liver.

on will so trouble the murderer that he will lose command over himself and make a clean breast of his crime in his agitation. When he enters the room he can see noth-clear the muster-out roll of my company were the names of 160 men, and there were just 60 present. The others had dief or been disabled. The Government allowed the men to retain their rifles upon the payment of a small sum, and most of them chose to do so.

On Dec. 22, 1865, the time of parting came. Every man of Co. H came to me, shook me by the hand, giving me every kind wish, and receiving mine in return. Then Serg't Scott formed the company, and the men "counted twos" for the last fire.

Then Serg't Scott formed the company, and the men "counted twos" for the last fine of the colored population of Baltimore began to flock into camp.

The murderers who have stood this ordeal without flinching are comparatively few. The majority of them exhibit the utmost terror, and implore to be taken out of sight of the corpes. There is a chair in the room where the confrontations take place, in which the hajority of the men to their officers.

It was the last salated to the right in four ranks tossed their rifles to the right in four ranks tossed their rifles to be taken to the most out of sight of the corpes and entire family. French criminal counsel have found that these confrontations almost always result in the confusion of their clients, have looked into the matter, and believe they have discovered that the examining magistrate presses him with questions, and then, at what he considers the opportune moment, gives the signal for the curtain to be pulled back.

The murderers who have stood this ordeal without flinching are comparatively few. The majority of them exhibit the utmost terror, and implore to be taken out of sight of the corpes. There is a chair in the room where the confrontations almost always result in the confusion of them chose to do for the most notorious murderers of the their family. French criminal counsel have found that these confrontations almost always result in the confusion of their clients, have looked into the matter, and believe they have discovered that the examining magistrate presses him to be taken to the morgue, and it seems that it is a moot point whether the authori-ties will be able to convey them thither by force.

TOADS AND BATS.

Their Usefulness in the House Demonstrated by Experi-

New York Herald.

As a result of experiments with toads As a result of experiments with toads and bats, it has been demonstrated that a house, or even a community, can be rid of various troublesome insects, including flies and musketoes. These experiments were made by Prof. Clinton F. Hodge, of Clark University, Worcester, Mass. Prof. Hodge's first experiment was with the toad. "I constructed a small pen in my garden," he said, "and in it, in a pan of water, installed a male and female toad. To attract food for them I placed within the inclosure bits of meat and bone. The results were as satisfactory as they were unexpected. The toads spent most of the time sitting within reaching distance of the bait, and killing the flies intracted by it. I watched one toad snap up 86 house flies in less than 10 minutes.

the batt, and killing the files attracted by it. I watched one toad snap up 86 house files in less than 10 minutes.

"One day I gathered a quantity of rose-bugs in a tin box, and began to feed the bugs to a toad. At first I did not count, but, finding his appetite so good, I started to count. When I had counted over 80 bugs, and the toad showed no signs of wishing to conclude his meal, I picked him up. Previous to my beginning to count he had taken anywhere from 10 to 20 bugs. "I found the toad equally greedy for rose-beetles, canker worms, ants, caterpillars, Tround the toad equally greedy for rose-beetles, canker worms, ants, caterpillars, moths, June bugs, weevils, snails, and many other insects. So, too, in a house, a room may be cleared of cockronches by leaving a toad in it over night.

"A single toad may destroy over 2,000 worms during the morths of More."

"A single toad may destroy over 2,000 worms during the months of May, June, and July, and one of these harmless creatures may well do a gardener service to the amount of $19.88 each senson, and yet he can raise $20.000 worth of toads at an expense of not more than 20 cents.

"Farmers in England buy them, paying as high as $24 per 100, for use in their flower-beds and gardens. For household purposes a small number of toads could be given homes in an aquarium. At night the toads could be let loose to kill bugs, while in the day they could kill flies. I have built a sort of cage of wire screen, a foot wide and two feet long, the top of which is kept open. It is only necessary to not in the care.

"QUICK AS A FLASH BOB BOWEN HELD UP THE TATTERED FLAG."

Serg't Scott came to my room, and with him was a good-looking, middle-aged mulatto woman and a bright, pretty yellow girl of 16. The Sergeant's face was very asober, and my heart sank when I saw them, for I knew instinctively who they were.

"Lieutenant." said the Sergeant, saluting, "here is the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles, "and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles, "and he turned and walked away. I knew at once that the mother and sister of Geo. Uncles," and he turned and walked away. I kne fly.

"My attention was turned to the bat moth, the insect to

OUR

LATEST AND GREATEST OFFER!

Good Only Till Sept. 30. Read Every Word; It's for You.

BE SURE AND READ THE SMALL TYPE.

name, company, regiment, and date of To every one who sends $1 for a year's subscription to THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE, between now and Sept. 30, we will send THE FEATHER for one year FREE.

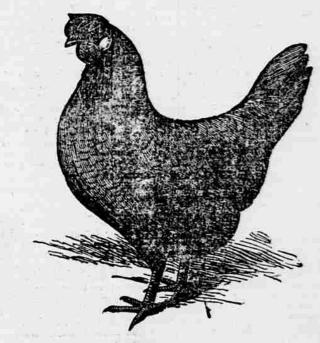

Constantly on the alert for good things to offer to our subscribers, we have made ited period with the publishers of THE rangement we can give THE FEATHER for a whole year to every one of our subscribers who renews and to each one who Remember, this splendid illustrated Month-

We do not furnish THE FEATHER at any price except in connection with a subscription, either new or a renewal.

WHAT IS THE FEATHER?

THE FEATHER is a large quarto-sized reatest interest. THE FEATHER is edited by George E. Howard, the well-known expert.

Specimen illustration from THE FEATHER.

PLEASE NOTICE: No free books go with this offer. It is impossible to give more than The Feather free. Ask for it WHEN you subscribe.

Address THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE, Washington, D. C.